Macron vows to heal France's rifts

BLOOMBERG
Paris, May 8

EMMANUEL MACRON PLEDGED to heal France's rifts after his victory over Marine Le Pen in the presidential election, saying that he'll work to address the concerns that were exposed during one of the most divisive campaigns of recent history.

The president-elect made his comments in a speech to supporters at a campaign headquarters in Paris when he conceded the election. Macron received 66% of expressed votes, the French Interior Ministry said. The far-right Le Pen had 34%.

"I know that there is anger, worry and doubts that many of you have expressed," said Macron, 39, pledging to "fight with all my energy against the deepening divisions" in French society. Addressing a rally outside the Louvre museum, he added, "I will do everything in the next five years so that they have no more reason to vote for extremes."

Macron's commanding victory over the National Front candidate on a platform of free-market policies strengthens the European Union and deals a blow to the populist wave that has roiled western democracies for the past year. An independent centrist who has never before run for office, he is set to become the youngest-ever elected French head of state.

"Macron is a new face and that's exactly what France and Europe need," said Andre Sapir, a senior scholar at the Bruegel think tank in Brussels. "Macron gives Europe huge hope."

Macron is likely to be inaugurated next Sunday, his campaign manager Richard Ferrand said on Europe1 radio. He shook off questions about Macron's potential pick for prime minister. The euro reversed early gains and was down 0.3% to $1.0965, as investors weighed the task ahead. The French stock market's CAC40 Index opened down 0.7% trimming a sharp rally over the past week as his victory became more likely.

A pro-European globalist, Macron's challenge will be to end years of high unemployment and sluggish growth, deal with the terrorist threat that has traumatized the country and, ultimately, restore faith in the political establishment.

Leaders were quick to hail Macron's achievement, with UK Prime Minister Theresa May among the first to offer her congratulations. German Chancellor Angela Merkel praised his pro-European campaign in a brief call.

President Donald Trump took to Twitter to congratulate Macron on his "big win."

The outcome will help restore some of the EU's self-confidence after it was battered by Britain's decision to leave the bloc last year. A committed free-trader, Macron will help act as a counterweight to the protectionist wing of Trump's White House, along with Merkel, Canada's Justin Trudeau and Xi Jinping of China. France is mainland Europe's second-largest economy and leading military power.

The election result is at once a blow to Russian President Vladimir Putin, who met with Le Pen at the Kremlin in March, and a rebuff to Trump, who said in April that Le Pen was the "strongest" candidate on borders, even if neither leader officially endorsed her.

"This is of huge significance for French politics," Bruno Cautres, a political scientist at the Sciences Po institute in Paris, said by phone. "The voters' demand for political renewal has swept everything aside, politicians of the establishment have been eliminated one after the other, and the winner is someone who has never been elected before." Capturing the presidency is a remarkable achievement for a Macron, who built his En Marche! movement in just the past year.

Merkel's party picks up momentum state vote as rivals slump

BLOOMBERG
Berlin, May 8

ANGELA MERKEL'S PARTY picked up momentum in a German state election, convincingly defeating the Social Democrats who want to unseat the chancellor in the national vote in September.

As Merkel's preferred candidate Emmanuel Macron won France's presidential election, her Christian Democratic Union posted an unexpectedly clear victory in a much smaller contest in Schleswig-Holstein. It's a confidence booster for the CDU ahead of elections next Sunday in SPD-led North Rhine-Westphalia, Germany's most populous state with 18 million people and the main bellwether before the federal ballot.

Sunday's vote offered further evidence of Merkel's rebound in the polls, reversing an SPD surge in early 2017 after the party named former European Parliament president Martin Schulz to run for chancellor.

With polls in North Rhine-Westphalia showing the CDU and SPD running neck and neck, pressure on the Social Democrats to avoid another defeat will grow. Merkel plans to hold a news conference at about 1 p.m. in Berlin on Monday.

"This is a disaster for the SPD," Carsten Nickel, a Brussels-based analyst for Teneo Intelligence, said by phone. "The SPD doesn't know whether it wants to move toward the center or move its base on the left. Merkel is doing very well in using this situation to her advantage."

Schulz, who's seeking to deny Merkel a fourth term on Sept.

24, called the result a setback for his party. After the SPD closed the gap between Germany's two biggest parties as recently as March, national polls now put Merkel's Christian Democrat-led bloc ahead by as many as 8 percentage points.

"This isn't a happy morning for us, there's no way to pretend otherwise," Schulz told reporters in Berlin on Monday.

After Merkel's party won an unexpectedly clear victory in Saarland in March, Schleswig-Holstein marked the SPD's second consecutive defeat in regional elections.

State premier Torsten Albig conceded defeat after his coalition of SPD and Greens was voted out in the region of 2.8 million between the Baltic and North seas. The CDU took 32 percent of the vote, gaining 1.2 percentage points compared with 2011, while the SPD slumped more than 3 points to 27.2 percent, according to official results published early Monday.

N Korea claims plot reveals US state sponsored terrorism

ASSOCIATED PRESS
Tokyo, May 8

AFTER ARRESTING Two American university instructors and laying out what it says was an elaborate, CIA-backed plot to assassinate Kim Jong Un, North Korea is claiming to be the victim of state-sponsored terrorism from the White House.

The assertion comes as the US is considering putting the North back on its list of terror sponsors. But the vitriolic outrage over the alleged plan to assassinate Kim last month is also being doled out with an unusually big dollop of retaliation threats, raising a familiar question: What on Earth is going on in Pyongyang?

North Korea's state-run media announced today that an ethnic Korean man with US citizenship was "intercepted" two days ago by authorities for unspecified hostile acts against the country. He was identified as Kim Hak Song, an employee of the Pyongyang University of Science and Technology.

That came just days after the North announced the detention of an accounting instructor at the same university, Kim Sang Dok, also a US citizen, for "acts of hostility aimed to overturn" the country. PUST is North Korea's only privately funded university and has a large number of foreign teachers, including Americans.

What, if anything, the arrests have to do with the alleged plot is unknown. But they bring to four the number of US citizens now known to be in custody in the North.

Iran warns will hit militant 'safe havens' inside Pak

REUTERS
London, May 8

THE HEAD OF the Iranian armed forces warned Islamabad on Monday that Tehran would hit bases inside Pakistan if the government does not confront Sunni militants who carry out cross-border attacks. Ten Iranian border guards were killed by militants last month. Iran said Jaish al Adl, a Sunni militant group, had shot the guards with long-range guns, fired from inside Pakistan.

The border area has long been plagued by unrest from both drug smuggling gangs and separatist militants.

"We cannot accept the continuation of this situation," Major General Mohammad Baqeri, the head of the Iranian armed forces was quoted as saying by state news agency IRNA.

"We expect the Pakistani officials to control the borders, arrest the terrorists and shut down their bases. If the terrorist attacks continue, we will hit their safe havens and cells, wherever they are," he said.

Iran's foreign minister Mohammad Javad Zarif visited Pakistan last week and asked Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif to improve the border security. Pakistan assured Iran it would deploy additional troops along its border.

"This isn't a happy morning for us, there's no way to pretend otherwise," Schulz told reporters in Berlin on Monday.

After Merkel's party won an unexpectedly clear victory in Saarland in March, Schleswig-Holstein marked the SPD's second consecutive defeat in regional elections.

State premier Torsten Albig conceded defeat after his coalition of SPD and Greens was voted out in the region of 2.8 million between the Baltic and North seas. The CDU took 32 percent of the vote, gaining 1.2 percentage points compared with 2011, while the SPD slumped more than 3 points to 27.2 percent, according to official results published early Monday.
